CAMPUS CAPERS

by MISAE HIRONAKA

They cant go around kissing babies to get votes but what they do do. The R.H.S. was in the middle of a lively campaign on Friday. The so called committees had decorated the school the night before, and posters of every description were thick which ever way you looked. The candidates, Phillip Redd and Ramona Heggie for president and Anita McBride, Rae Jensen, Eileen Dahl Ronald Spackman for vice; Shirley Fisher, Sham Stevens, Norma Dahl for secretary, campaigned in the classrooms during the first period in the afternoon.

The Rae Jensen party sang an altered version of "Huggin and Chalkin" with a well padded Janet Turner on the scale. When they left Sham Stevens and his campaigners entertained us. Don Petrak read a few verses from the Book of Revelations amazing the Bibles they print now days! A quartet sang a song that sounded a lot like 'For Sentimental Reasons" asking everyone to vote for Norma Dahl. 'Open the door High School and let Anita In. Know it? Never heard the words until a sextet of pro-Anitas sang. Phillip Redd also had a novelty. During the speeches Jack Dahl, reading a paper tried to keep an oversized pair of overalls from falling and exposing his red flannels. However all his efforts were in vain; he turned around and on his back was a placard which said "Was my face Redd". Grade 8 boys with verses asked you to vote for Shirley. Little Eddie Kubota stole hearts and votes with his piece. Th Mitchell sisters as Dutch girls thought Ramona was best and a couple of drunken sailors, Adrienne and Stony sang a mournful ballad about an empty beer hottle with a note. A Hilly Billy band from the deep south were 'Doin' what comes Naturally' when they voted for Eileen.

Down in the Gym we were again bombarded with speeches, songs, gags, etc. Willa Rae as Lincoln gave the Gettysburg address which strangely enough said vote for Norma in a more round about way. Deib Gough surprised us by doing a very good imitation of Roosevelt, Churchill and Chiang KiaShek. He is one of the talented mimics of the R.H.S. A boys 'chorus girls' act and a cow boy song hy Geraldine Court and chorus were other highlights.

You know of course [illegible] executive is Pete [illegible] ron and Norma [illegible] only one thing we have [illegible] ions—they dont [illegible]

The Far North

THE ARCTIC REGIONS OF CANADA are not generally regarded as habitable except for the Eskimos and the few traders and Mounted policemen whose work takes them there. Any exploration which has been done has been mostly by ships, in the coastal waters, or by airplanes flying over the land. Increased interest however, is now being shown in our Far North, which is known to be rich in furs, fish, lumber, metals, oil and coal. It is also considered probable that there may be rich deposits of minerals there, such as have been found in the region of Great Bear Lake. It is apparent that the development of these natural resources would be of great benefit to the country, and there is growing interest in the possibility of opening up that part of the country.

Recommend That Study Be Made

Dr. O. M. Solandt, director-general of Canada's three armed services is of the opinion that "a thorough knowledge of the Arctic and its problems is essential to the regional defence of North America and to the peaceful development of the Canadian North. This, he believes, could only be accomplished by a long-term, well-planned program of research and development which would include mapping, charting, and studies of the geology, mineralogy, plants and animals of the region. Dr. A. L. Washburn, the director of the Arctic Institute of North America, is of the same opinion as Dr. Solandt, and he also believes that the time has come for a program of detailed research in the Far North, the results of which would benefit not only those who might wish to live there some day, but the continent as a whole.

* * * * *

Canada Is Far Behind Russia

Both Dr. Solandt and Dr. Washburn have pointed out that Canada is far behind Russia in development of her Arctic regions. In Russia, an organization similar to the Arctic Institute of North America was formed some years ago to study problems connected with the areas of their country which border on the Arctic. A great deal has been accomplished there both through research and through practical efforts. There is no reason why such progress could not be made here. The most colorful chapters of Canadian history tell of the pushing back of frontiers and of the opening up of region after region by far-sighted and courageous men and women. It is possible that we may someday see the frontiers of the Canadian North pushed back in the same way. Although modern warfare has made it necessary to look upon it as a necessary outpost of defense for the North American Continent, it is to be sincerely hoped that the great store of natural resources there may be developed for peaceful purposes and that they may add to the prosperity of the entire country.

MUST KEEP MOVING

If our earth should come to a halt in its travels around the sun, it would begin falling toward the sun, and in two months would crash into it and be burned up.

ALBERTA WANTS NATIONAL DISH
—OFFERS PRIZES

EDMONTON—Launching a tourist publicity campaign, the Alberta Government is offering more than $900 in prizes for a contest to find the province a "national dish" — one to become as famous as the haggis of Scotland and the roast beef of England. First prize is $500, second $200, third $100 and there are 12 prizes of $10 each.

It is suggested that the principal ingredient of the dish should be meat; it should be served with Alberta-grown vegetables, and should be sold profitably at $1 per plate.

Silver Wedding Gift A Reminder

The Manchester Guardian says the Parliamentary Labor party's silver wedding gift to Mr. and Mrs. Attlee of an eighteenth-century Dutch silver porringer was chosen no doubt, without any thought of Charles II or foreign alliances, but it may remind the Prime Minister of both. For Charles is said to have offered a reward to anyone who could find a rhyme for "porringer", and the prize was claimed for lines suggested by the betrothal of the King's neice to William of Orange:

The Duke of York a daughter had
He gave the Prince of Orange her;
So now your Majesty will see
I've found a rhyme to porringer.

Outlook Gloomy For Supplies Of Men's Shirts

TORONTO.—A gloomy picture on the outlook for supplies of men's shirts was given by manufacturers answering questions for more than 300 Toronto men's wear retailers at a clothing fair here.

One manufacturer said the shirt supply can't expect much improvement for at least six months because of lack of labor and materials. Another said he did not think the public would stand for increased prices when the government lifts present subsidies on clothing.

James Camerin, president of the Ontario Retail Men's Wear Association, criticized manufacturers "for not accepting the fact that we have been educating the public to do without for the past six years, and now they want something to buy." 2714

My Week.

by R. J. Deachman

I met a man the other day who was downcast about the future of the world. I held out to him a word of encouragement. We are always downcast after a war. The uselessness of the whole bloody business shocks the mind and soul of man. There is a tremendous resiliency in the human race, we soon recover from our disasters and march on as if nothing had happened. The affects of the first Great War were disappearing in the United States, Great Britain, France, New Zealand and Canada by 1922. Complete disorganization accompanied by violent inflation occurred in Germany but by 1923 Germany was on the road again and the old trend had been resumed by 1926. Russia recovered more slowly. Controls can be carried too far, they check progress.

These examples show that unless we are completely foolish —and we know more about running a world now than we did then—we shall go back to normal within a few years and wonder why we were so stupid as to think we saw the end of the world merely because we indulged in war, a not uncommon propensity of mankind.

THE PAST

I like to think back to the conditions of 100 years ago, or a little better than 100 years ago. Great Britain had not yet begun to grow, now we are wondering if the old lady is going to survive. Resolute courage and an unfailing humor are great assets. They made a nation grow and a people prosper. Surely dogged purpose has been exhibited no where more than ever before. We may restore our faith.

There is a note of hope when we think of the sackcloth and ashes view which was taken of the world a few years ago. In 1887 David Wells, an American business analyst had this to say of the future:

"There is very much that contributed to the support of the idea. . .that the industrial activity of the greater part of this century has been devoted to fully equipping civilized countries of the world with economic tools, and that the work of the future . . must be necessarily that of repl and replacements rather than new construction."

Who then could imagine the world of today? Modern railways, automobiles, trucks, aeroplanes, telephones, as they are today were never dreamed of then. The man who writes "My Week" in 1960 will see things of which I know nothing. Men will be making new things, doing old things better than in that distant age. Perhaps people will satisfied with the government then, or more critical, which will be equally helpful if it is wise.

A LOST VISION

Here is another, this time from the American Commissioner of Labor:

"On all sides one sees the accomplished results of the labor of half a century. This full supply of economic tools is the most important factor in the present industrial depression. The discovery of new processes of manufacture will undoubtedly continue and this will act as an ameliorating influence, but it will not leave room for a marked extension, such as has been witnessed during the last fifty years, or afford a remunerative employment of the vast amount of capitol which has been created during that period. The day of large profits is probably past."

I call your attention to the concluding sentence of that statement: "The day of large profits is probably past." This man, a commissioner of labor, was worrying because he thought that the day of large profits was nearing an end and a few days ago I heard Mr. Coldwell telling his radio audience that profits were far, far, far too large. Such is life.

LEGISLATURE NOTES

report on its findings to the legislature during later sittings of the present session.

Another group of visitors to the Speakers Gallery was composed of 12 students from New Zealand, who are visiting Universities and colleges all the way across Canada. They were given a reception by the members who applauded when Mr. Speaker Dawson drew the houses attention to their presence in the gallery.

It was stated by some members that it was likely the debate on the Speech from the Throne would not end before next week. Most of the speaking is done by Social Credit members who wish to go on record for their constituents. The opposition can only speak once to three times by the government members and all of them are not likely to take part in the debate.

The need is Great.

Beginning March 3rd, the Canadian Red Cross Society will make its first major National Appeal for funds since the end of the war with an objective of $5,000,000 for 1947. This represents a minimum amount required to finance a peacetime programme in Canada true to the objects of the Red Cross Charter.

"In peacetime or war to carry on and assist in work for the improvement of health, the prevention of disease, and the mitigation of suffering.

This peacetime appeal for funds represents a challenge to the people of Canada--an opportunity to voice appreciation in terms of dollars and cents for outstanding service rendered our fighting men by the Canadian Red Cross during the war years. Now the society is turning to the needs of pence and alleviation of human suffering in Canada. Some wartime funds, under the War Charities Act, earmarked for and being spent on war relief, cannot be used for this purpose.

With the money to be raised in the next few weeks the Red Cross plans to provide aid to Veterans--- more Overseas hospital on the frontiers of Canada, the National Blood Transfusion service, Crippled children's hospitals, stronger Junior Red Cross and extend such services as First Aid, Home Nursing, Swimming instruction, Nutrition and facilities for Disaster Relief.

In spite of Winston Churchills unforgettable words "Every man and every woman will have the chance to show the finest qualities of their race and render the highest service to their cause", this paper wholeheartedly recommends full community support to the Canadian Red Cross Society's plea for funds to undertake this important peacetime programme.

WHAT TO DO UNTIL YOU CAN GET A NEW CAR

New cars are still very scarce. It may be a long time before there are enough to fill orders. Therefore your present car—no matter what its age—is a very valuable piece of property. Treat it as such!

If it is a Chrysler or Plymouth, we urge you to bring it in for a periodic check and tune-up. This is an economical service and will surely save you money in the long run. And any time that work needs to be done on your car, remember that we have the special tools, factory-engineered and inspected parts and trained mechanics needed to do it quickly and economically.

Africa Has One Elephant Farm

Gangala-na-Bodio, the only elephant farm on the African continent, is situated in a remote and rather lovely spot on a rise overlooking the winding river Dungu. It lies in the centre of an immense stretch of savannah bush country well populated with elephants; the Garamba Reserve to the north covers about 1,900 square miles. R. F. Snader, writing in the London Geographical Magazine, visited the camp when about fifty elephants were being rounded up for their daily bath, which takes place at five in the afternoon and which they evidently enjoyed, disporting themselves like a lot of children. Each elephant was mounted by its own mahout; and these showed marvellous agility in adhering to the elephant's backs while they went deeper and deeper into the river until practically submerged, allowing themselves meanwhile to be thoroughly scrubbed. They are stabled for the night in an open-air sleeping place. The elephants are trained for sale or for hire and play a useful part in agriculture, forestry and public works. The elephant needs good treatment; plenty of the right food, regular care and suitable hours of work—not during the heat of the day, when he must be allowed to rest in the shade. Those who know the African elephant say that he is very impressionable, even timid; that he must not be surprised or roughly handled; and that the men who deal with him must remain calm in all circumstances.

In addition to transparent milk pipes made of plastic for use in dairy plants, we now learn that there is a shatter-proof glass milk bucket coming up. The bucket has a groove around the shoulder into which a heavy rubber ring is fitted while a metal ring shields the base against shock.

NEW GLASS PANES BEND LIGHT RAYS

A new building in St. Louis is to have glass panes that will bend the rays of the sun to the ceiling and prevent light glares.

If this can be made to work on a building, why couldn't the same principle be applied to windshields on automobiles and do away with the sun glare that too frequently blinds the drivers?

Probably it could also be applied to diverting the rays of full beam headlights from the eyes of the oncoming driver. At least the possibilities seem to be there.—Kitchener Record.

WHAT'S A FARMER?—MECHANIC, BOTANIST, CHEMIST AND A WEATHER EXPERT

(By John Moore in 'The Fair Field')

As I stood beside the auctioneer—one of my uncle's partners—during his slow progress down the line of implements, I realized for the first time the extraordinary complexity of the farmers' job. There was the binder and the threshing machine, each needing the frequent services of a mechanic to keep it in running order. There were the implements of haymaking; the mower, the tedder, the horserake, the haysweep; the implements of sowing and cultivation—drills of different sorts, scuffles, ploughs, horse-hoes, harrows, and so on; and there were all the various tools which a man's hands must learn to use—which Mr. Jeffs' hands during the long years had learned to use—such as spades, forks, hoes, pitchforks, hayrakes, scythes, short curved bill for ditching and hedging, saws, hatchets, and so on.

The good farmer must be handy with all these, he must possess the ancient knowledge of the ploughman and the new craftsmanship of the mechanic for he will have to keep in order his petrol engines, gas engines, tractors, and trucks. He must be a bit of a carpenter, a bit of a wheelwright, a bit of a blacksmith. He must know the old secrets of the dairy, and the modern practice of chemical manuring. In a single morning he may be called upon to repair a gate, to clear a blocked drain, to cold-shoe a horse, to mend a pair of reins, to graft a young apple tree, and to clean the truck's carbureter.

But besides this considerable technology, he must possess a kind of wisdom which is much more profound and much more difficult to acquire. He must know about land and about the use of land, how to match his stock to the pasture and his crops to the soil. This is something which cannot be described in terms of technology. It is true that he must be in a sense a botanist, a chemist, and a biologist, a good meteorologist, knowledgeable in genetics, and perhaps a horticulturist and a forester as well.

But it is much more than that; it is much more than technique. There is strategy mixed up in it. His farm is the battlefield, upon which he deploys his crops and stock against his foes, which are sometimes visible, such as pests and blights and weather, and sometimes invisible such as economic blizzards and falling markets.

Unless he is a bad farmer, on a sort of farm-cum-dealer, his problem is hardly ever a short-term problem; it is not a matter of tactics. For he must look forward into the future, the next season and the season after that; and he must look back and seek wisdom out of the past. Always it is a strategist's battle; and the battle never ends.

A new oil field for Alberta became a possibility when Imperial Oil, after years of disappointing exploration work, brought a well successfully into production Thurs., Feb. 13. Called Leduo No. 1, it is 12 miles north-west of Leduo and 16 miles south of Edmonton. As the well started to produce, the first mixture of oil, gas, mud and water was "flared" to prevent contamination of storage tanks. The flare is seen (ABOVE) sending clouds of flame and smoke skyward. Hon. N. E. Tanner, Alberta's minister of lands and mines (BELOW) turned the valve which actually started the flow of oil into the tanks. With him are Vernon Taylor, centre, and Walker Taylor, assistant manager and manager of Imperial Oil's producing department in western Canada.

Monday night saw the Jacks in Magrath, trying their skill and luck in the first game of the playoffs for the southern division. The never-to-be displaced skill of the Lions came to the fore and they won for themselves, the top spot on a 48-40 score. The game was close, fast and clean, with only councilman Sid [illegible] and Ted Turner hitting the shower-proof. This gives Magrath the [illegible] of the five in the series, the [illegible] of which will be played and reported in this column.

The second game of the senior play-off series was played before a packed house in the Raymond Opera House Wednesday night with the Jacks tieing up the series with a 65-52 win over the Magrath Lions.

The Jacks have seldom played a better game than this, not only in [illegible]oring but in defence as well. The fouls were fairly even, the Jacks making 20 and the Lions 24. Michelson, Relfson and Nalder made 15 out of the 20 for the Jacks and hit the showers early while Coleman of Magrath was the only one to get the thumb from the referees.

Raymond committed 2 technical errors, one for taking 6 time outs and one when West forgot to report to the referees before commencing play. Individual scores follow:
